

10/16/67

GALLEY

"There always comes a time when one must choose between contemplation and action. This is called becoming a man."

Camus

The war in Vietnam continues. People continue to be killed- - men, women and children. They die by bombs, napalm and guns. The weapons are ours.

We too are dying. It is a slower, more subtle death- - by degrees- - by turning away, by keeping silent. It is a moral death.

The difference is we can move, we can open our mouths, we can say no.

Help say it. March on Washington October 21.

October 16

Vietnam Committee