Dear Charlotte,

It seems to have happened that I shall be teaching a year-course in Shakespeare, starting this fall, and not teaching what it says in the catalogue -- that is, Plato. An announcement to this effect will have to be, I reckon, mimeographed for registration purposes. I think you could conveniently take the course description for such an announcement from my catalogue statement the last time I did the Shakespeare course, '49-50.

I hope all runs smoothly, that the college for example continues to exist, that your summer is not altogether taken up with administrative junkeria of the sort with which this letter presents you. We are having a good time, very quiet -- mostly just sitting here, or on the beach, looking at the sea.

Bret regards, Howard
