Between the Body and the Breathing Earth:
On Language and the Ecology of Sensory Experience

ABRAM

Speculative, learned, and always 'lucid and precise' as the eye of the vulture that confronted him once on a cliff ledge, Abram has one of those rare minds which, like the mind of a musician or a great mathematician, fuses dreaminess with smarts.

—The Village Voice

David Abram, cultural ecologist and geophilosopher, is the author of Becoming Animal: An Earthly Cosmology and The Spell of the Sensuous: Perception and Language in a More-than-Human World. David's work has helped catalyze the emergence of several new disciplines, including ecopsychology. His essays on the cultural causes and consequences of environmental disarray have been published widely. Named by both the Utne Reader and Resurgence as one of a hundred visionaries currently transforming the world, David has been a recipient of the international Lannan Literary Award for Nonfiction, fellowships from the Watson and Rockefeller Foundations, and in 2014, he held the international Arne Naess Chair in Global Justice and Ecology at the University of Oslo. Abram is co-founder of the Alliance for Wild Ethics.
