

GALLEY

The Mobilization for Peace is over.
The Viet Nam war continues.

We marched together in New York City. That march is over.
But still the soldiers march through the jungles and the villages of Viet Nam.
The Viet Nam war continues.

We listened to the speeches at the U.N. Building. They are finished.
But the cries of human anguish are not silenced.
The Viet Nam war continues.

The rally ended in rain. That rain is ended.
But the rain of bullets, bombs, and blood does not cease.
The Viet Nam war continues.

Finally, we came home.
But the American troops in Viet Nam did not come home.
The dead never will.
The Viet Nam war continues.

While we read books, the U.S. government bombs airfields.
While we write papers, they broadcast speeches.
While we bask in the sun, they destroy crops.
While we sleep, they kill.

The Viet Nam Committee will meet next week to evaluate the Mobilization and to plan future projects. All kinds of ideas
(and biases) are welcome. We've got to get moving again!
