Galley-Re: Paglia, Re: Kirkpatrick, Re: Tristman, Paglia, Salamon
& Kirkpatrick

To the Above Professors:

Ha Ha Ha, the jokes on you. The only one behind those 'Pro Davis' galleys was a weary, cynical male writer and political science student who is

a) completely sick and tired of foolish pedants with superiority complexes
b) annoyed when self righteous intellectualism becomes the call to order of all that is right and good in the world when it actually represents a sentiment and singular point of view..

c) also completely sick and tired of snotty faculty galleys which hedge on their statements, 'no it's not censorship but we feel that the exhibit belongs in the toilets anyway...'

d) and last but certainly not least, feed up with the stupid and irrational waste of paper we have been engaged in. Fine, I type the galleys-no money for me. But I'm also on Student Council and will work to see that an alternate program is at least considered which saves premium quality paper for other uses (not to mention the expense) while also devising a way to continue complete freedom of information dispersal...of any sort friends.

End of Alphabet. Where are your heads at anyway? Our miserable world is breaking apart at the bloody seams...is the solution to be found putting in precious hours at the Yale library? And while you are thinking about what to reply to this impudent ~~student~~, also consider who represents Life, and who represents Death.

Sullivan

P.S. Very brave and expedient of you Ms. Paglia mentioning that Elizabeth Davis killed herself after prolonged mental disorders. If your intensive scholarship extended into the realm of the Act of Suicide perhaps you might have been a little less cruel in your usage-but then again, it is more difficult to learn humanity and caring than it is topics from books.
