

"Freedom" was the theme of the spring academic festival held Wednesday at Castleton State College. At right and above, CSC dance teacher Susan Sgorbati and students found new uses for the American flag while performing "Dance Improvisations on Freedom" in the Campus Center multi-purpose room. Other activities during the day long festival included a 60s-style teach-in, a series of lecture/discussions on the relationship of freedom to various topics and a simulated New England town meeting for members of the college community.
