

Waitresses Report

f. 24th

All recommendations listed below are purely in the interest of food conservation and have nothing whatever to do with any personal prejudices.

I. The following foods have again and again been found by the waitresses to be so unpopular as to warrant their being discontinued.

Creamed turnips

Parsnips

Maccaroni and cheese in custard squares
(ordinary maccaroni and cheese preferred)

Stew ( At present disliked by the majority or found to be insufficiently filling)

Indian pudding

Baked pears

Tomato juice mixed with sauerkraut juice

Oyster stew

Carrot soup

Squash soup

Gherkins (served with canapes)

II. We suggest platter service at noon; it definitely helps to avoid waste and saves time in the long run. If this necessitates purchasing new china there would still be a saving, a food saving, which is, after all, the purpose of this branch of the community's conservation program.

III. Experience has taught us that service would be quicker and food would be saved if sauces (tomato, cheese, or caper) were brought on separately.

Note: Again considering the basic aim, appearance of the food is relatively unimportant.
