

ALASH

OCTOBER 16, 7:00 PM, GREENWALL AUDITORIUM

The three musicians who make up Alash—Bady-Dorzhu Ondar, Ayanool Sam, and Ayan Shirizhik—have won numerous international awards in Tuvan throat singing, a technique which allows vocalists to sing multiple pitches at one time. Ensemble members also play a variety of Tuvan traditional instruments, contributing to an overall musical experience that the Washington Post described as “absolutely stunning.”

ALASH WORKSHOP

OCTOBER 17, 12:00 PM, GREENWALL AUDITORIUM

Alash will introduce students to the awe-inspiring art of Tuvan throat singing as well as traditional Tuvan instruments, culture, and way of life. Alash will perform in a creative and lovely atmosphere in which students will learn about a rich cultural heritage that is virtually unknown in the West. The musicians work with students individually or in small groups. This workshop will include: mini-concert with explanations, demonstration of Tuvan instruments and throat singing, Tuvan folk tales and time for questions and answers.
