The Bennington Theatre Studio.

The three one-act plays which make up the March Production have been a literally howling success in the two dress rehearsals. The Bennington High School audience at the last rehearsal was as appreciative as it has ever been at a Theatre Studio play. All reports state that Elizabeth James does a remarkably versatile job in changing character for each of the three plays.

The Community may be interested in knowing more about the Vocational Conference held on the Bennington campus just before the opening of the second semester.

The Conference was under the auspices and direction of the Commission on College Work of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and was held for students from the women's colleges and universities of New England. Fifty students attended, representing seventeen colleges, junior colleges and universities.

Members of the Conference arrived in time for dinner on Friday and stayed until early afternoon on Sunday. During that time there were talks by the various leaders and general discussions on such subjects as Social Work, Rural Work, Foreign Missions, Teaching, and Training and Personnel Work. There was a free period Saturday, & the skating pond was popular.
