Re:

Is there a College rule regarding the restriction of knitting in classes? There has been a good deal of complaint from the Music faculty about this distraction in their classes, and even some complaint from students who do not knit in classes. Therefore, if my understand is correct that there is some rule about it, I wonder if there would be some way of enforcing it. For instance, would you prefer that it be done through EPC representatives or is it a matter of individual instructor's permission?
