Dear President Fels:

As a recent recipient of the College Bulletin - 1964-1965, moments of nostalgia engulfed me - Memories of the past came rushing back: the Commons - Bingham Living Room, the library - all were component parts of my development. All contributed to my being and gave me the strength necessary to exist in our present day society; strength to work as a field representative in the deep South the summer of '63, strength to view my people - to view the South and to view America - white America as it exists today outside of Bennington's sheltered, ivy-colored campus nestled deep within the folds of Vermont hills.

CHEP

I was appalled at the lack of Negroid representation in your bulletin, appalled because as a Negro I had believed in Bennington, allowing it to fulfill many of my dreams - those dreams that one, as a Negro in America, holds deep within. As an institution, sensitive to people and to their needs, aware - aware of our society. I strongly urge you to live upto your ideals and to recruit at all expenses Negro students, as we too have a part - a very major part to play in this society; and then to portray us in your literature, for we have contributed to your campus and to your ideals as an institution of higher learning.

Sincerely yours,
Judith Coleman Collins
